Historical Background

- August 1895 – 1896 – Construction of the buildings by General Enterprise (British multi-partnered enterprise) on the land of Italian earl Maurico De Bozdari. Main building was recorded as a Pringipos Palace hotel and smaller building was recorded as Director of Ottoman Bank Edgar Vincent's house.
- 1896- 1900 – The license for hotel was not granted by the Ottoman Sultan, with the reservation of strategic location of the building. Long discussions and correspondence between the Ottoman bureaucrats about the possible function of the building were held during that period.
- 1901 – Eleni Zarifi bought the buildings and donated them to the Greek Patriarchate.
- 21 May 1903 – The buildings were opened as a Greek Orphanage, which took care of nearly 5,800 Greek Orthodox orphans until its closure in 1964.

This brings a social and spiritual value to the history of the building, becoming a symbol of collective memory and culture for the people of Istanbul and Princes Islands, adding high symbolic and intangible values too.

Historical Background

- 1915-1916 – Orphans were evacuated from the building and the building was used by Ottoman Military Department during the 1st World War
- 1918 – 1921 – Russian emigrants were settled in the building
- 1921 – 1964 – The buildings were used as orphanage and school.
- 1964- The orphanage was closed.

Istanbul Ecumenical Patriarchate's Initiative to save the building

- Abandoned since 1964, the extreme weather conditions and the lack of maintenance have extensively damaged the building, leading to its current state of extensive disrepair and serious risk of collapse.
- Urgent need for immediate safety measures – 1st phase of the restoration
